IMPORTANT – We encourage foreign participants to apply for their visas as early as possible. Some consulates may have backlogs in scheduling visa interviews. Therefore, applicants should first consult the U.S. Department of State's visa appointment and processing wait times website.

Further information on business visas can be found at the U.S. Department of State Business Visa Center website and the IV0 website – the National Academies International Visitors Office (IV0). The International Visitors Office assists international students, scholars, and other travelers who are coming to the United States for scientific purposes. The IV0 additionally provides resources to the broader scientific community on visa interview preparation, travel to the United States, and international conference organizing.

If you are experiencing significant visa delays, please fill out the visa survey here. This will bring your case to the attention of the U.S. Department of State.

Visa processes and customs

Visa regulations depend on your nationality and country of origin. We suggest you contact your local U.S. Embassy or Consulate for full and official instructions on the specific visa regulations and application procedure that apply to you.

It is the responsibility of the participant to obtain a visa if required.

How to Enter the United States

Learn about the most common types of visas for business, student or travel you may need when coming to or traveling through the United States, plus review what other documents you need to enter the U.S. Also, find information on how to apply for an immigrant visa.

Procedures for Entering the United States

A visa is a document that allows a foreign citizen to travel to the United States and ask for permission to enter. However, having a visa doesn't guarantee entry. The Department of Homeland Security and Customs and Border Protection officers at the airport have the power to decide if you can enter or not. If you're allowed in, they'll give you a stamp or a paper form as proof. You can find more information about entry requirements, restrictions on bringing certain items, and other details on the CBP website.

Foreign nationals must be fully vaccinated against COVID-19 before entering the U.S.
